

About the Author

Todd G. Gongwer is first and foremost a husband and a father. Beyond that, he has spent nearly twenty years developing his expertise in leadership, team, and cultural dynamics through a broad range of experiences spanning the world of business and athletics. After having grown up in a family business, Todd ventured out to eventually hold a number of senior executive level positions in companies ranging from entrepreneurial start-up to public entity. He also served as an assistant college basketball coach for one of the most successful programs in the country during the 1990's when the team won three NAIA II National Championships in four seasons. Todd currently presides over Nelson's USA, a multi-state food service franchise company.

After spending five years as a Vice President of Leadership and Cultural Development of a large manufacturing firm, with plants throughout the country, Todd felt inspired to write and release LEAD...for God's Sake!, A parable for finding the heart of leadership. The book takes readers on a compelling journey deep into the heart of leadership where the answers to some of the most important questions in leadership can be found. A highly energetic communicator, Todd now speaks frequently to business, sports, and non-profit organizations challenging his listeners to think deeper about what truly lies at the heart of their purpose in leadership, and in life, spurring them on to become the very best leader they were meant to be.

